

Olivia Fox Cabane has lectured at Stanford, Yale, Harvard, MIT, the Marine Corps War College and the United Nations. As keynote speaker and executive coach to the leadership of Fortune 500 companies, she helps people become more persuasive, influential, and inspiring. From a base of thorough behavioral science, Olivia extracts the most practical tools for business, applying the latest in global behavioral science to everyday leadership needs to improve her clients' productivity, effectiveness and efficiency.

In addition to being a columnist for Forbes and The Huffington Post, Olivia is often featured in media such as The New York Times, Bloomberg or BusinessWeek. She has been profiled in The Wall Street Journal as well as NPR's Marketplace show. Olivia currently serves as Director of Innovative Leadership for Stanford's StartX program. Her course at Berkeley's Business School was so popular that university staff had to guard the entrance to ensure that only the students admitted to that course gained entrance. Her first book, The Charisma Myth, published by Penguin/Random House, went into second printing before it even launched.

Testimonials

"Olivia's inputs on personal branding and persuasion were very relevant and useful. In fact I found that most of her inputs could be readily and easily applied in our daily work. The immense amount of positive energy and passion she gives added to this insightful information."

- MIT Business School.

"Our high-performing managers were amazed and impressed with the amount they learnt... You are playing a critical role in enhancing their self-confidence and self-esteem."
