

Marcia Reynolds, PsyD amuses, inspires and fascinates her audiences as she translates the latest discoveries of how the brain works into workable strategies for dealing with life's challenges. Participants come to understand what makes communication so difficult and life so complicated. Whether they are leaders, professionals, entrepreneurs or parents, Dr. Reynolds then provides practical formulas and techniques they can use both at work and at home. In addition to speaking and training around the world, Dr. Reynolds coaches both individuals and executive teams. Her clients come from technical, pharmaceutical, financial, shipping and banking corporations and both governmental and quasi-governmental organizations. Prior to her starting her own business, Marcia's greatest success story came as a result of designing the programs for a semiconductor manufacturing company facing bankruptcy. Working with the executive staff, she designed the organizational change program that helped the company become the #1 stock market success in the United States when they went public in 1993. Marcia's focus on increasing communication across organizational lines and empowering cross-functional teams to create were credited as a major part of the turnaround. Marcia's doctoral degree is in organizational psychology. She has published two books, Outsmart Your Brain and Wander Woman: How High-Achieving Women Find Contentment and Direction. Excerpts from her books have appeared in many places including Harvard Communications Newsletter, U.S. Business Review, Forbes.com, CNN.com, Psychology Today and The New York Times and she has appeared on ABC World News. Marcia is also a pion...
