

The former White House director of economic policy and past managing director of the $15 billion Tiger hedge fund, Todd Buchholz has both crafted economic policy as a public servant and invested in the market.

In entertaining presentations refreshingly free of investment jargon, Buchholz shows audiences how to interpret strategy-altering phenomena for wiser, sounder investments, providing you with a snapshot of the market to come: what companies are on the right track to success, what you can learn from them and how their successes can be yours as well.

Buchholz discusses critical issues, conveys practical survival tactics and shows audiences how to adapt to the ever-changing global economy. Buchholz, a contributing editor for Worth magazine, has authored numerous books, including the critically acclaimed Market Shock, New Ideas from Dead Economists, From Here To Economy and Bringing the Jobs Home, the business leadership book, New Ideas from Dead CEOs, Rush: Why You Need and Love the Rat Race and The Price of Prosperity: Why Nations Fail and How to Renew Them.

Testimonials

“Todd did a fantastic job and I have received so many great comments from the attendees. He was able to share his perspective on the global economy in an entertaining way.”

- First Midwest Bank.

“The conference went very, very well, and the evaluations are all good. Todd Buchholz got outstanding evaluations and in private conversations I heard from many attendees on how highly his session was valued. Once again, you’ve helped me get the credit for putting together a great event. Personally, I really enjoyed working with Todd and Joe...they are terrific people and I feel like I’ve made a couple of new friends.”
