

After nearly a decade of Fortune 500 corporate experience in project management and business strategy consulting, in 2003 Dana Brownlee founded Professionalism Matters, an Atlanta-based corporate training company.

An energetic and innovative speaker and trainer, Dana has thrilled audiences with speaking events across the U.S. and globally providing blunt, transformational, no-nonsense advice on topics ranging from how to lead effective teams and speak truth to power to tactics for building antiracist workplaces.

An avid workplace anti-racism advocate, she blends 18 years of experience as a sought-after leadership expert and team-building facilitator with three decades of personal experience as a Black woman working in and around corporate America to provide an engaging experience that's down to earth and relatable while insightful and profound.

Author of The Unwritten Rules of Managing Up (Berrett-Koehler, 2019), Ms. Brownlee is an acclaimed thought leader around managing difficult senior level personalities to positively impact organizational outcomes. Author of multiple LinkedIn Learning courses and a senior Contributor for Forbes Careers, her business expertise has also been featured by CNN, The Wall Street Journal, The Economist, Working Mother, Entrepreneur and other notable publications. She holds a BSIE, BS (mathematics), MBA and PMP. If you're ready to take small steps towards big progress, Dana can help.
