

David McBee is an author, trainer, and professional speaker. He works with sales representatives and business owners around the world teaching and creating a curriculum about the intricacies of internet marketing as well as relationships and personal development. Considered an expert in his field, David is known for his passion, sense of humor, and talent for making the complicated simple while also helping people to become better versions of themselves.

Born and raised in the suburbs of Kansas City, this Eagle Scout earned a BFA in Theater from Avila University and spent his twenties as a salesperson and entrepreneur. Today he writes, trains, and speaks on everything from online marketing to personal development and relationships.

David is married to his best friend and they have a son and a daughter. His passions include family, travel, barbecue, jeeps, the outdoors, and reading.

Testimonials

I attended a two hour seminar by David, hosted by the American Rental Association of Pennsylvania. His insights and helpful advice was well worth the two hour drive to meet him and hear what he had to say. I came away from the seminar with a large "to-do" list, which I immediately started to tackle. He gave us valuable information with regard to SEO and organic search listings and has been more than willing to answer any of my follow-up questions via email. The information he provided can only do one thing - make my business grow!

Thank you David for the great seminar last week. This is my second time attending one of your seminars, and I can't wait for my third. Internet marketing is evolving so quickly that it's hard to keep up, but you are right on top of all the trends. I like that you actually take time to learn about our industry so that you can give us best practices for reaching our customers, not just the masses. It's obvious that you have a passion for this, and it comes across in your teaching.
