

Alex Kip, a budding Broadway star, lost his singing voice to cancer with only a 15-30% chance of survival at 20 years old. Now in complete remission, with his voice restored, Alex has given inspirational keynotes to UnitedHealthcare, Abington Jefferson Health, University of Michigan, Wanderlust, UN Culture of Peace, and more.

Alex's play, My Other Voice, chronicling his cancer journey was named "Best of the Best" by the Detroit Free press, featured in PBS, NPR, and NBC. He's been named a "Leukemia and Lymphoma Society Hero" and his inspiring writing has appeared in Huffington Post, Addicted2Success, and Lifehack.

As the creator of the top-rated iTunes podcast, SoulFeed, his spiritual talks have been downloaded over 1 million times in all U.S. States and 130+ countries while topping the charts in self-help and health. He has also appeared in major motion picture films (Marvel), TV (NBC, Syfy, Comedy Central, Spike TV), and theatrical performances across the country.

By combining all of his experiences and interests together, he delivers a theatrical creative message of hope and possibility for all ages.

Testimonials

"Alex, you brought tears to my eyes... thank you again for the kindness, inspiration and hope... it is amazing how this one act of kindness is going to spread to a million acts of kindness. It was a special night and night I will never forget. Glad I was a part of it with the rest of these amazing people!"

- Manager, Events and Meetings, UnitedHealthcare National Accounts.

"Random acts of kindness... Last Thursday night I had a front row seat to witness just this very thing...and it changed my life. I'm serious! Thursday, April 24 at 8:30 PM I witnessed such a powerful act of giving that it brought the entire room to tears."
