

Jane Sarasohn-Kahn is a health economist, advisor, trend-weaver and author supporting organizations at the intersection of health, technology and people. Jane advises on strategy via environmental analysis, scenario and strategic planning. Jane founded THINK-Health after working for ten years with health care consultancies in the U.S. and Europe. Her clients are all stakeholders in health: technology, bio/life sciences, providers, plans, retail, financial services, food, and consumer goods. She founded the Health Populi blog in 2007, celebrating a decade and over 2,300 blog posts as of April 2019, all written by Jane.

Jane sits on the advisory boards of the CAQH Health Efficiency Index, Center for Health Policy and Media Engagement at George Washington University, healthBank, Onboard Health, WEGO Health, and Women of Color in Pharma. Jane is also on the Board of The Clinic, a free clinic for residents in her community. She is a frequent speaker and has also contributed to the Huffington Post, Tincture on Medium, and the Washington Post Health Rx Panel.

Jane has been named one of the Top 100 Influencers and Brands in Digital Health, one of the Top 100 Influential Economists in the World, one of the Top 5 Women in Healthcare Blogs, one of 40 Healthcare Transformers, and one of Rock Health's 100 Women in Healthcare, among other recognitions.

Jane holds an MA (Economics) and an MHS (Health Policy) from the University of Michigan. While Jane loves her work, she is even more passionate about family and home, Slow Food and her local CSA, and living a full and balanced life.
