

David Rush is one of the most prolific Guinness World Records title holders on the planet. He's broken more than 250 Guinness World Records Titles that have been viewed/heard over 150 million times, all since late 2015.

He is a speaker, author, entertainer, and retired startup product manager at Cradlepoint, the most valuable tech unicorn exit in Idaho's history (when purchased for $1.1B by Ericsson in 2020). He has an electrical engineering degree from MIT and an MBA from Boise State. He is a passionate promoter of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math through talks and DavidRush4STEM.com.

David competed on Season 15 of America's Got Talent and has been a featured guest on the TODAY Show, the Tamron Hall Show, the Huckabee Show, among others. His records have been made fun of by the likes of Jimmy Fallon, James Corden, Ellen, Seth Meyers, and many, many more.

At MIT, he won the best lab of the year for a juggling simulator and was a 2-time winner of the talent show. He is the world's fastest juggler, the world's slowest juggler, and has the record for the most kiwis sliced in one minute with a samurai sword while standing on a Swiss exercise ball.
