

Aziz Abu Sarah is a peacebuilding entrepreneur, author, and international speaker. A Palestinian raised in Jerusalem, his work has earned him the titles of National Geographic Explorer and TED Fellow. This Palestinian's own journey from combatant seeking revenge to peacemaker seeking tolerance has led to an innovative method of peacemaking through tourism in conflict zones. The MEJDI Method brings those from differing sides of a conflict together as travel guide colleagues each presenting their viewpoints. This multi-narrative approach to travel was originated by Abu Sara in Israel and has expanded to other countries—reaping remarkable results throughout the world. In 2014, he gave a TED Talk about his vision for redefining tourism and his stories of facilitating reconciliation journeys between individuals and groups in conflict are truly inspiring. The fundamentals of this same method of peacemaking and reconciliation can be taught and applied to corporate, community, and religious groups and organizations.

Aziz has spoken at numerous international organizations, corporations, and universities, including The United Nations, The European Parliament, Georgetown, Yale, and Harvard. He has published articles in The New York Times, National Geographic, Haaretz, and The Jerusalem Post. He regularly does analysis for CNN, Fox, and Aljazeera. Aziz is the recipient of the Goldberg Prize for Peace in the Middle East from the Institute of International Education, the European Parliament's Silver Rose Award, the Eisenhower Medallion, and the Eliav-Sartawi Award for his Middle Eastern Journalism. He was named one of the 500 most influential Muslims in the World by the Royal Strategic Centre in Jordan for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014. He won th...
