

Steve Smith made an audacious childhood dream to be an astronaut come true despite multiple setbacks. He is one of America's most experienced astronauts with 4 spaceflights and 7 spacewalks to repair the Hubble Space Telescope and to build the Space Station. At the conclusion of his career, he was the third most experienced spacewalker in history and he twice received NASA's highest honor, The Distinguished Service Medal.

Steve's path to space was long - three decades - and arduous. That path included a life-changing near-death experience as a youth, an MBA and two engineering degrees from Stanford, elite national athletics success, tenure as an IBM Product Manager, a medical rejection by the Air Force, four astronaut application rejections by NASA, and a medical rejection by NASA. He relentlessly pursued his childhood dream.

At NASA he was the first in his class named to a flight and quickly rose to the Deputy Chief Astronaut leadership position - the number two Corps' position - where he led the daily operations of the 125-member Astronaut Corps. He led multiple failure reviews, operations teams, and spacewalking crews. After his flight career, he served as a Diplomat living overseas for a decade and conducted NASA negotiations with European and Russian space agencies.

Steve now uses his one-of-a-kind mix of experiences to serve as a board director, venture capital advisor, and keynote speaker. He credits hard-won lessons learned and a resulting set of principles, which he calls the "explorer's mindset," for giving him the creativity, will, and grit to achieve his goal and succeed as an astronaut, decision maker, and leader. In his speeches, he shares the magic of spaceflight and motivates audiences to use the explorer's...

Steve Smith

Speech Topics

- Life Balance
- Leadership
- Innovation

Testimonials

Our folks were mesmerized by his stories. Hearing Steve's experiences and his insights from his unique vantage point was very motivational! I appreciated his energy, humility, and his deep perspective on life. Steve shares a message of hope and persistence, born of his experiences as a true explorer.

- Vice President Global Customer Operations, LinkedIn.

Steve is a gifted storyteller with a unique ability to connect with an audience. His anecdotes and sense of humor kept attendees engaged throughout as we felt the ups and downs of Steve's journey. He used images very effectively to complement his narrative and help to make complex topics more accessible. Steve went above and beyond to provide an excellent experience for our audience and was a pleasure to work with. We're excited to bring him back in the future!

- Director, Salesforce.