

The problem isn't getting someone to handcuff the CEO and stick him in a box. Those volunteers are easy enough to find. The real trick is finding someone to make him reappear, quickly, and with a smile on his face.

Enter Lisa Menna, professional magician.

The first woman to be asked to lecture at the Magician's Olympics, Menna was also voted Best Corporate Magician by "The International Conjurers Journal." A seasoned international entertainer, she has performed live throughout the United States and all over the world, including Caracas, Madrid, London, Bombay, Istanbul, Tokyo, Stockholm, and Helsinki. Multilingual as well, she can communicate with audiences in Japanese, Chinese, Spanish, German, French and Turkish. With audiences ranging in size from 30 to 3,000, she has shared the stage with such legends as Bill Cosby, Muhammad Ali, and Roy Orbison. She has been featured on CNN, "Good Morning America," and "Entertainment Tonight," as well as The Wall Street Journal and Inc. magazine.

A highly effective and novel alternative to traditional presenters, Menna turns ordinary corporate productions into unforgettable and transformative events. Labeled "a product-marketing person disguised as a magician," her performances magically open up group communications, build team spirit, promote new ideas and products, and create unforgettable experiences. By weaving her clients' messages into her magic, she educates, entertains, and energizes audiences worldwide.

While she won't reveal her secrets, Magician Lisa Menna does transform events from the ordinary to the extraordinary. She can make a CEO vanish. She can cut a Marketing Director in half. And she can turn your competitor into a chicken. To book Lisa Menna call Execu...
