

One of NBC News' top correspondents, Andrea Mitchell was named Chief Foreign Affairs Correspondent in November 1994. She reports on evolving foreign policy issues in the United States and abroad for all NBC News broadcasts and for MSNBC. In addition, she covers a wide range of domestic and political issues from a post that includes various world hot spots, summits, Presidential trips, the State Department and the CIA.

Mitchell's extensive and varied reports include such major foreign policy issues as U.S. - China relations, the Hong Kong handover, the war in Bosnia, the Middle Eastpeace process, normalization of relations with Vietnam, conflict with Iraq, the civil war in Afghanistan, nuclear proliferation in India and Pakistan and terrorism.

Here at home, she has reported on the campaign finance investigation, Medicaid fraud, sex discrimination in the military, gun control and a wide range of political topics.

Prior to being named Chief Foreign Affairs Correspondent, Mitchell had been NBC News' Chief White House Correspondent, a post she assumed after covering Bill Clinton from the New Hampshire primary through the entire 1992 presidential campaign. During her time at the White House, she broke stories on cabinet changes, policy decisions on gays in the military and military intervention in Bosnia and Haiti.

From 1988-1992, Mitchell served as Chief Congressional Correspondent. During that time, she played a major role in reporting on the budget, the savings and loan bailout, the Clarence Thomas hearings and other legislative issues. She also served as a regular political analyst on "Today."

Mitchell first covered the White House for NBC News from 1981-1988, during both of Ronald Reagan's terms as President. She reported on a va...
